STOUGHTON YOUTH ACCIDENTALLY SHOT AND KILLED TODAY

George Heinrich, Aged 17, Shot by Accident by Companion While He Was Riding in Canoe This Morning.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Stoughton, Sept. 15.—George Heinrich, aged 17 years, was accidentally shot and killed at 7:20 this morning by William Anderson, aged 22 years, both of this city. The two men were riding in a canoe on the Yaluma river, three and a half miles north of this place.

Young Heinrich was riding in the front seat of the canoe and Anderson in the rear. While the canoe was being paddled down the river about one mile where he saw a farmer at work on a farm and whom he summoned for aid, Dr. Olson of this city was hastily called, but five minutes after the message had been sent for medical attendance the lad had passed away without regaining consciousness.

Coroner F. W. Lyman and Sheriff Brown of Madison arrived here this morning from Madison to investigate the affair. After an examination they decided that no inquest was necessary and that the shooting was purely accidental.

Heinrich is the son of a barber in this city, George Heinrich, and is well known in this place. Last spring he represented the high school in an interscholastic football contest held here and was exceptionally brilliant in his studies. He was well liked by every one who knew him.

The entire city is grief-stricken at the terrible tragedy and the homes of both parties are in grief.

The funeral will be held Monday from the First Lutheran church in this city.

CALIFORNIA LIFE IN SUMMER-TIME

After being in California for the space of six months and twenty-seven days, the writer of these letters was fortunate enough to strike a "steady job" and that accounts for the sudden cessation of the occasional letters from Riverside which appeared in The Gazette earlier in the year.

For he it known that a grocery store career, here in the land of promise, is no less strenuous than it is back in the Hoover City. When the dispenser of sugar, soap, sardines, syrups and sundries arises at five o'clock each week day morning, begins work in the largest and busiest grocery store in the city shortly after six; takes one hour off for dinner and quits the store at 6:15 in the evening, he does not find much time to pose as a newspaper correspondent, even though he may have much of interest to write about.

Just about this season of the year is the dullest here in Riverside, for all who can do so are away, either at the seashore or up in the mountains. Of course there are enough of us left here who do not go to either of these resting places, to keep the wheels of business revolving, for we all have to eat and this means the butcher, the baker and the purveyor of groceries have to put in. Personally I am not as enthusiastic over the Riverside brand of summer weather as I am over the winter article. When a fellow starts down town in the early morning, he is clad in coat, vest and gooseneck, but when he fares forth at the noon hour he has shed all three and goes ducking along in all the friendly shade he can find, be it evening, building or tree.

A change of from 40 to 50 degrees in temperature during 24 hours is a new experience for us as a daily occurrence, and yet that is what we undergo here during the summer months. The local temperature record for this city for last week is before me as I write and its figures show a maximum average for the seven days of 101 and a minimum average of 56 degrees.

Some of those who sought for rest and recreation in the wooded crests of the San Bernardino mountain range had a better time than even we were having here in our tropical environment, for the great forest fires, which swept in such uncontrollable fury over a great expanse of the range, caused many of them to flee for their lives and threatened destruction to some of the most popular of the mountain resorts. It was a wonderful sight at night, when the fires swept over the forest, for though twenty-five miles distant, so great were the flames that they were easily seen from Riverside and their glow lighted up the northern sky, while the great smoke cloud that lifted itself above the mountains made the onlooker almost imagine that a giant volcano was adding its spectacular features to the other marvels of this wonderland.

But if the volcano was wholly imaginative the earthquake shock which visited this entire section a few days ago was most realistic, for it shook everybody and everything in a way that left no doubt as to its identity. It was one of the experiences which we shall consider ourselves fortunate to no longer, for prior to this we had partaken of a ripe olive and had learned how to back a hot tamale. Just a word in conclusion about the first picnic of our Wisconsin society, which was entirely successful in every particular and was so productive of good feeling and comradeship that we unanimously decided to hold a mid-winter social in some hall here in the city, to which we will all look forward with pleasant anticipations, for our picnic experience has demonstrated that the Riverside Rodgers are a congenial and loyal bunch, all glad to get together and all ready and willing to do their part in making any gathering of the society a splendid success.

TRAFFIC TIED UP BY BAD WASHOUTS

Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Gratiot on Mineral Pt. Div. As Result of Washouts.—Large Force Repairing Tracks.

All local trackmen and many others from the Madison division were rushed to the scene of the washout near Gratiot last night and yesterday afternoon so that traffic between Monroe and Mineral Point might be resumed as soon as possible.

Four or five local engines and their crews are tied up beyond the washout and are unable to return to this city. Trains from this end can run only to the scene of the first washout a short distance on this side of Gratiot and then back into this city.

Beyond Gratiot there is no means of communication by rail between Schulburg and Mineral Point, and one passenger car train is tied up on the short line into the latter place.

Roadmaster Murphy of Waukesha, with a large force of men, who have been employed between Stoughton and Edgerton went to the scene of the washouts last night and are joining forces with the trackmen from here and about the Mineral Point division in an endeavor to have the road open for traffic today. Latest advice received from Gratiot is to the effect that it may not be possible to use the line before tomorrow.

Superintendent Woodward is at the scene of the washout and he and all the other men are working the repairs as fast as possible. Several bunk cars were taken there last night for the accommodation of the large force of Italian laborers taken to the place.

A special train went through here to Monroe this morning where the fair is now in progress. Engineer Wilkin and Fireman Hummel handled the train from here.

Engineer Koelling and Fireman Roberts went out this morning on 391.

Engineer Mead and Fireman Shebert took an extra west at 2 p. m.

Chicago & Northwestern.

Over one hundred fair visitors boarded the special train which left here for Milwaukee this morning at 7:15. The excellent weather and the special accommodation given for the day induced many to spend the day at the state fair. Many of those who went to Milwaukee today expected to remain for the remainder of the week as their excursion tickets are good until Monday.

Frank Hennessy, timekeeper at the local shop, who was granted a vacation yesterday started today with his mother for Milwaukee, where they will attend the state fair and remain for some time visiting friends. From there they expect to go to Chicago to spend a few days with relatives.

Engineer Dudley is laying off today and is relieved by James Wilson on 542.

Engineer R. K. Smith is on duty on the 530 a. m. switch engine.

Fireman Walters is running the bunk car job.

Machinist James Garrison is laying off today.

Engine 1559, which has been in storage for some time went out last night in charge of Engineer Koelling.

Engine 917 was brought here last night and will be sent out for service on the new Milwaukee, Sparta and Northwestern branch.

MOTION PICTURES TAKEN AT FIRE STATION TODAY

Additional Views for Janesville Film Taken by D. H. Louthain This Morning.

Additional views of the fire run for the five hundred foot film, which D. H. Louthain, operator at the Majestic theatre, is making of the city of Janesville, were taken this morning near the west side fire station. Exposures were taken of the fire trucks attached to the hose and extension ladder wagons, running from the station to the corner of Milwaukee and River streets. Four enlargements of views from the film exposed on Wednesday have been made by Ben Smith of the Smith Drug company and are on exhibition in the drug company's window. The pictures on the film were enlarged seventy-two times, from three-fourths by one and an eighth inch size to eight by ten inches.

FURTHER ENDEAVORS TO LOCATE FRIENDS

Further Effort is Being Made to Find Relatives of Elmer Cook, Killed in Washington.

Endeavors are being made to locate relatives in Janesville and Rock county of Elmer Cook, who died September 3, in a hospital in Tacoma, Wash. The local police department was asked to aid in finding relatives of the man, but thus far have been unable to discover anyone who knew him. E. N. Haugen of Orfordville was in the city today and visited at the Gazette office in an endeavor to glean further information regarding relatives of the young man. The body is in charge of C. O. Lynn of Tacoma. The following telegram was received by Haugen:

Mr. E. N. Haugen, Orfordville.
Elmer Cook was struck by a train at Kent, Wash., and died in hospital in Tacoma, September 3rd. Body at my place. Henry thinks you can locate his relatives near Janesville or in Rock county. If you can, have them wire me what they want done with the body. If not, write.
C. O. LYNN.

Henry Haugen, son of the Orfordville man, is located in Tacoma, and referred Mr. Lynn to his father. The latter has been looking up the matter, but as yet has not gained the information he seeks.

NAVAL OFFICER MUST QUIT

Charges Against Lieut. Smith Called Too Grave for Publication.

San Francisco, Sept. 15.—Orders have been received here from the navy department by Rear Admiral E. K. Moore, commanding the Yerba Buena naval station, to intercept Lieut. Roy C. Smith, U. S. N., upon his arrival on Saturday on the Japanese liner Shinyo Maru. It is said Smith will be offered the alternative of having his resignation accepted immediately "for the good of the service" or of being placed under arrest and returned to the Asiatic station and there tried by a general court-martial upon charges of so grave a nature that the specifications are closely withheld in the department.

From what has been gleaned from the flagship Saratoga, upon which Lieutenant Smith was serving at the time of the offenses of which he is accused, it is understood that those were such that their publication would shake the navy as roughly as did those that forced Rear Admiral E. E. Barry out of the service several months ago.

INDUSTRIAL SHOW IS BEING PLANNED

Secretary Lane Plans to Hold Industrial Exhibit in Link—Nominal Fee to be Charged Visitors.

While no definite plans are as yet formulated for the industrial exhibition, it is now assured that it will be held some time this fall. Secretary F. E. Lane, who has charge of the entire management, expects to make a departure from that of last fall when the products of the various factories of the city were displayed in the store windows.

He has conceived the plan of having the exhibit in the link where the different articles can be seen to better advantage and at the same time the different steps in their production can be shown either by verbal explanation or by having operatives there to perform the actual work of manufacture before the audience.

It is planned also to charge visitors a nominal fee for the purpose of defraying the expenses incident to the exhibit and to raise funds that are needed by the Industrial and Commercial club.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

YOU doubtless know that your high-heeled shoes tire you much more than your common sense walking shoes;—you, of course, meaning the sex that wears these instruments of torture.

You probably realize that the reason you were so abominably tired the other night was not because you had done anything especially strenuous but because you wore those French heeled shoes while shopping.

But do you realize that high heeled shoes may do much more than tire you—may actually injure you?

If you know anything at all about your internal organism you know that it is a very delicately balanced affair. Now the high heeled shoes throw the weight of the body forward, and if this position is held for too long a time, doesn't it seem quite natural that this delicate equilibrium might be disturbed?

If you don't believe me, ask any doctor. I'll wager he'll talk more forcibly than I have.

Yes, I know those dainty, pretty little high heeled shoes are much more attractive than the big, clumsy kind. I just love them myself.

And I grant you that they are all right for occasions when you are going to be sitting down most of the time.

But for occasions when you will have to stand or walk a good deal—well, is the discomfort worth while at the price of certain exhaustion and the risk of physical injury?

Do you know of anything more mortifying than to have someone with whom you have been talking over the telephone for five or ten minutes finally acknowledge that she has company or some pressing engagement from which you are keeping her?

I don't.

The agony of looking back and thinking—"And she's been squirming and trying to get away all the time she was talking."

Whereas if anyone courteously tells you the moment that you call up, (that it is not just convenient for her to talk just then and that she would like to call you up later you are not in the least disturbed or disgruntled.

As I was passing a public dump the other day a gust of wind threw half a dozen letters at my feet.

A few of them were torn in two or three fragments. Many of them were entirely whole.

The subscription of one of the letters which lay at my feet was, "Your loving sister, Anno"

Presumably such a letter would contain intimate family details. And there it lay—and its companion—ready for "him who runs to read."

I didn't read the letters but I don't think I should have blamed anyone who did.

Carelessness like that which put those letters untorn into a waste basket to be thrown into the litter barrel and thence to be carried to the public dump richly deserves such punishment.

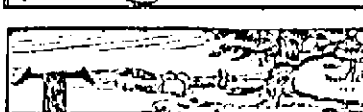

Where do the letters you throw into your waste basket go?

Perhaps you think they are burned up, but are they? Surely not in the summer months when there is no furnace fire.

On the whole I think it behooves you to be sure your cast off correspondence is going to be burned up, or else to tear it into mighty fine shreds.

I can assure you I shall in the future.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THE presence of a large amount of cellulose in food enables an often to satisfy the appetite without injury from over-eating.

Cellulose is the woody fiber in fruits and vegetables.

WHEN MARKETING.

Remember that fresh fish have eyes bright, not glazed and sunken. The flesh is firm, the odor good.

Look to see that your milk bottles hold the standard measure. They are usually a quarter of a cup short on a quart. This amounts to a good deal in the course of a year's bill.

Does your baker carry bread uncovered through the street and handle it with uncovered hands? Or do you have it wrapped in paper? Pay a cent more and have clean bread.

Never buy cheap cotton towelling for dish towels. Linen keeps white, wears better, absorbs the water and are all-round better towels.

Have a pair of scales, good reliable ones, in the kitchen, and keep a strict watch on the weights. A good merchant respects such a careful buyer and will see that she is fairly treated.

Suggestions for Housekeepers.

When fruit juice refuses to jelly, add a tablespoonful or two of vinegar to the juice. When fruit is high, save the peellings and cores and many an extra glass of good jelly may be added to the store.

An easy way to fill preserve jars is to use a gravity boat. The handle makes it easy to dip and the spout is just right to enter the top of the jar.

If fat or milk is spilled on a soft pine floor, or in fact on any floor, pour cold water on it at once and the fat will harden and save sinking into the floor and making a spot.

Before using the casserole, put it into a pan of cold water and bring the water slowly to the boiling point. This tempers the dish and makes it bear strong heat without cracking. Boil about five minutes.

Never let dish water dry in the towels; rinse first in cold water, then wash them in hot soap suds and rinse again, and dry. Towels cared for in this way will never get gray.

Keep a cork on the letter file or spindle on your desk. It may save an eye or two.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

HOW KENTUCKY FOUGHT JOHN BULL.

By A. W. MACY.

Seldom has there been a more one-sided battle than that of New Orleans, fought January 8, 1815. So far as numbers were concerned, the advantage was with the British; for they had 12,000 soldiers, while General Jackson could muster barely 6,000. In discipline, too, the British were far superior, for they were well trained veterans who had seen service on the battlefields of Europe. The American soldiers, on the other hand, were for the most part raw militia, pioneers in coonskin caps and homespun clothing. But in results the one-sidedness was the other way. For three weeks Jackson had been training his raw soldiers, and when the British advanced to the attack they found the Americans strongly entrenched and well prepared to receive them. The slaughter was terrific. The British loss was about 2,000 killed and wounded, while the American side only eight were killed and thirteen wounded. And the pity of it was, there was no need of the battle, for peace had been declared between the two countries. Among the American soldiers were many from Kentucky, and for years afterward this song was often sung in that state: "Jackson led to the cypress swamp;

The ground was low and muddy;

There stood John Bull in martial pomp,

And here stood old Kentucky.

And when so near we saw them wink,

We thought it time to stop 'em;

Lord! it would have done your heart good

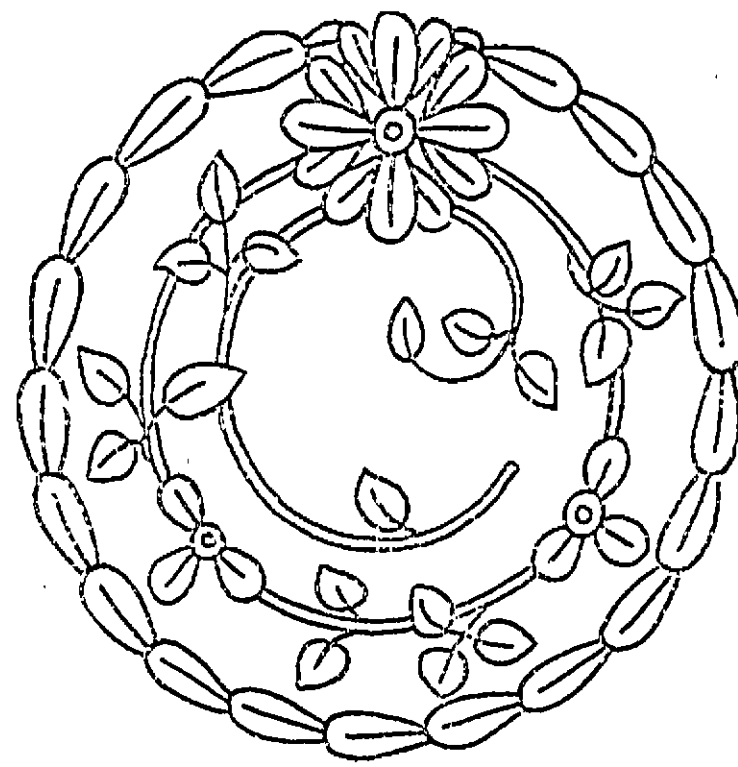

To see Kentuckians pop 'em."

Disorders of Children.

Diarrhoea is a disorder very common among children during the autumn months. It is attended by a high death rate, especially with children under two years of age.

The cause is usually improper feeding. The common practice among certain classes of people of feeding young babies various articles of food is very unwise. Up to the age of nine months a baby needs nothing but milk and is able to digest very little else. Yet how often we see people feeding babies coffee, potatoes, meat and even "things that are hard for a grown person to digest!" Babies fed entirely upon milk often become sick because proper attention has not been given to the care of the milk and bottles. Cleanliness is certainly a necessity here. With older children the diarrhoea is often caused by eating unripe or over-ripe fruit or vegetables.

The symptoms are an increased number of bowel movements, attended by scripping pains in the abdomen. They sometimes are accompanied by vomiting, headache and fever.

The treatment is first to stop all food, and clean out the intestinal tract. This can be done by giving an enema or injection of warm water or by giving a dose of castor oil. Some people are unable to understand why this should be done when there already have been numerous bowel movements. The diarrhoea is caused by some food that is remaining in the intestine and setting up an irritation. The irritating material must be removed before we can overcome the diarrhoea and we do this by means of an enema or dose of laxative. The child then should be kept quiet and warm. Heat applied to the feet and abdomen often will relieve the pain. A little peppermint water may be given to aid in expelling the gases, but nothing else should be given except on the advice of a physician. Paregoric and various pain relievers should not be given as they may be very injurious. Many deaths are attributed to various soothing syrups which contain harmful drugs. After the attack is over care should be taken with the diet. At first give only a little rice water or barley water.

In young babies, colic and diarrhoea often are caused by giving sugar in various forms. A tiny baby gets thirsty the same as an older person. Milk does not quench this thirst, so it should be given a little warm water several times a day. Many mothers are not content to let well enough alone and put a little sugar in the water. This forms gas and causes colic and diarrhoea. In giving peppermint water to young babies it is not necessary to add sugar. Of course the peppermint water should be very weak, in the proportion of one or two drops of the essence to a cup of warm water. The baby will take only about a teaspoonful of this mixture in drop doses. The majority of deaths from summer diarrhoea might have been prevented by a little care with the diet.

Poisoning From Food.

During recent years an increased number of cases of serious illness have been traced to infected or contaminated food. It may be there were as many cases in past years, but their cause was not recognized. At any rate, the increased consumption of canned meats and vegetables increases the possibility of such conditions. Lack of rigid laws for the inspection of foods has permitted unscrupulous dealers to put on the market foods not fit for consumption, but which, on account of their cheapness or attractive appearance, have been bought in large quantities by the poorer classes. This desire to buy things cheaply also causes people to purchase partly decayed fruits and vegetables.

In the warm weather too much care cannot be exercised in the care of food material, especially meat and milk. Many cases of poisoning are traced to warmed-over meats which had been kept too long, or to carelessly kept chicken salad, or contaminated fish.

The symptoms of poisoning are nausea and vomiting, with sharp, gripping intestinal pains. Headache, chilliness and dizziness often are present. There also may be considerable fever.

The treatment is, first to clean out the intestinal tract with a good laxative or castor oil or a one-tenth grain of calomel, taken every half hour for ten doses, followed an hour later with a dose of epsom salts. This must be done even though the bowels have moved several times, for it is necessary that all the irritating material be gotten rid of. The patient should be kept warm, heat being applied to the feet and abdomen. Hot drinks, as ginger tea, tend to reduce the pain and also provide the necessary stimulation. Never give "pain relievers" except on the advice of a physician, as these are usually very depressing to the heart and may be the "last straw" more than the already depressed heart can stand. Do not delay too long in sending for a physician, as there is danger of collapse and it may be necessary to give powerful stimulants to tide over the crisis.

Black figures on almost every gown in one way or another, and a striking costume seen recently at the seashore employed black satin most effectively. The design is shown in our cut. The skirt material was red dotted cream with seagulls, rimmed with bands of black satin. Black satin was also used for the blouse, which had a short peplum, belted in under an embroidered bodice. The deep shoulder collar of main face was joined in front under a bow of red ribbon velvet.

Science and God.

The late Lord Kelvin's tremendous knowledge never shook his faith. To a man in religious difficulties he once wrote these memorable words: "I have never read any theological book myself, being wholly occupied with science, which I find full of the evidence of God. And I find no need for theological books needed to keep me contented with the religion of my childhood."—Black and White.

DAILY DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

LONG LIFE ON MEAT ONLY.

"In Rio de Janeiro," says a writer in a recent number of a popular magazine, "in 1883 there was a Spanish physician, an exclusive meat eater, who was then 193 years old." This is doubtless an exaggeration and is not to be accepted as an argument in favor of an exclusive meat diet, but as additional evidence in favor of the monodiet, the system of eating only one food or a harmonious combination of two or three harmonious foods at a meal, as opposed to the conventional habit of mixing foods indiscriminately, a practice which the invalid especially, the athlete and the aged who wish to conserve vitality, should avoid. I am not sure that an exclusive diet of meat would not be preferable to the incompatible mixtures that many eat daily. The worst mixtures are meat and milk, meat and tomatoes or strawberries, meat and sugar, meat with rice, meat with cabbage, and some other vegetables. The best combination with meat is whole wheat bread, fruits, vegetables and milk should be taken at a separate meal.

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Granville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, R. F. D., Granville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. So other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Thought for Today

MRS. ROBERT M. LAVOLLETTE.

RUNNING.

RUNNING is splendid exercise to give sense of youth and joy to body and spirit. There is no such good, all around exercise as running. It quickens the circulation, increases the respiration, starts the perspiration. It prevents abnormal accumulation of flesh, starts up sluggish digestion, and eliminates systemic poisons.

You know "Elizabeth in her German Garden" jumped for joy, but who went behind a large bush so she might not shock her conventional neighbors. Unfortunately there are few places that offer this secluded for running, but when out for a "stroll" we may come to a secluded spot—a long, downward slope is best—where it is safe to start walking rather fast, then a little faster and a little faster until, without hardly knowing it, we are doing a gliding run. It is an excellent exercise to improve the walk, giving it smoothness and elasticity as well as speed. In the city we can pretend to run for a street car even if we are in no hurry; it is a kind of deception we can justify.

Encourage children to run. Perhaps we can secure freedom for our daughters that we do not ourselves enjoy. One of the best primary teachers I know, instead of admonishing her children to "walk quietly," or worse, on "tip-toe," secures the desired quiet, lightness and speed by saying, "run, now run."

The "sliding run" is an excellent substitute for outdoor running. Stand before a window—we should use our mirror more as a monitor of our exercise—repeat the running step over and over a hundred, or five hundred times. Let the arms hang relaxed. Do not let the body sag or the step become sullen, keep it well poised and the action light on the balls of the feet.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

One Way of Spoiling Children.

WHAT is considered the usual way to spoil children is by over-indulgence. Spare the rod and spoil the child has been quoted so fervently for so many generations, that it has become one of the cardinal principles of a child's bringing up. Few people seem to think that there is another side to the question.

But children can be spoiled quite as much by repression as by over-indulgence. The repressed child may be pleasant to have around (and the over-indulged one, but his life is being warped just as surely as is the child's who is allowed to be violent-tempered or obstinate.

The parent who directs every movement of a child's life, who makes every decision for him, is training that child to be indecisive and irresolute—two faults for which he will pay dearly when he comes to man's estate. He will have no individuality. He will be colorless, without backbone. He will be the one who will be led around by others, who can never make up his mind or decide for himself.

It is a nice question just when and how much a child shall be allowed to express himself, and just when he needs to be restrained. But parenthood is no easy proposition, if parents endeavor to do their duty, and this is one of the many problems they must solve.

With the sensitive or delicate child, the danger of repression is greater than with the usual active, vital youngster. The sensitive, shrinking child is apt to hold back and be shy about expressing himself. The parent comes to his aid, and either because he thinks he is helping, or because he impatiently does not want to wait for the child to make a decision, decides for him. But such a child should be encouraged to decide, to express and assert himself. His individuality needs to be encouraged. No greater harm can be done a child than to train him up to say, "I can't," to be irresolute. He will be hampered by such habits both in business and social life. The world wants decisive, resolute people, people with individuality, with initiative, people who say, "I can," and "I will," with determination and cheerfulness.

So in the effort not to spoil children with over-indulgence, be careful, too, not to spoil them with over-repression. Do not let their individuality grow rampantly; but on the other hand, do not stunt it.

NO MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WATERS
COPYRIGHT, 1911 BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Somewhere he did manage to gain the little vessel, and, with his pursuer pounding on not fifteen feet in the rear, doubled like a rabbit round its stern. He had a fugitive impression, as he passed, of a curious something crouching there; but with no time for recognition, or indeed for thought, he shot on, of a sudden painfully alive to the fact that he had been mistaken, that there was no refuge for him there.

Then he pulled up on the sound of a heavy fall behind him—a dull crash followed by a short, stifled cry and a sharp crack as of two stones coming together.

He looked back in time to see the short, starved figure of Appleyard straightening up from the body of the Chinaman, to see the little man's half-friendly, half-apologetic smile, and to hear him say in a tone of quiet reassurance: "All right, old top. He's down and three times out."

Incredulous and half exhausted, Coast staggered back to the boat.

The Chinaman lay like some monstrous eel of man, inert, sprawling, with a sagging jaw, shut eyes and a ragged, bleeding wound in the middle of his forehead. A bit of drift-wood—part of the water-bleached branch of a small tree—was twisted between his feet; a formidable jagged stone in Appleyard's hand coked out the story of his downfall.

"It wasn't anything," the little man explained with his timid, makeshift smile, noting Coast's expression. "I saw you coming—heard the shots to begin with—and made preparation accordingly. Lucky you chanced this way. Otherwise . . ."

He shrugged and cast away the stone that had served so famously. "We'd better be making tracks before the others come down on us," he suggested calmly.

"You—you've killed him?" Coast panted.

"Um—no; sorry to say," Appleyard moved to one side and picked up the revolver which had fallen from the Chinaman's hand. "Unfortunately just stunned. . . . Mebbe," he added, brightening momentarily, "I'll turn out concussion of the brain, but"—he made a dubious mouth—"I'm afraid not. Still, brutes are tough as pigiron. Still, I think I'm some prouder entry in the David and Goliath class—what? . . . Come along now; no time to waste."

He dropped the weapon into a pocket, and, seizing Coast's arm, began to trot him along the beach in the direction of the Echo's dory.

"You see," he commented severely, "what comes of going out alone. Next time I go calling, I want you to stay at home and keep out of mischief. Now you hear me?"

CHAPTER XI.

While his crew was whipping the dory's headwarp round a deck-clent, Coast stood in the cockpit of the Echo, frowning thoughtfully at the blurred loom of land to starboard, whose shadow seemed to fall cold upon his soul with a sinister promise of suffering and disaster. For there was Katherine, there Blackstock, there mystery, terror, death; . . . and there he himself must be, for her sake.

Out of the horror and turmoil of the last half-hour he emerged with conviction and understanding. She must not be left alone in that place of nameless perils. Such doubts as he had previously entertained no longer found footing in his thoughts; it was settled now; he would stay.

In the emotional stress of his unforeseen encounter with the woman temporarily he had forgotten the victim of the howling. But now, having his conclusions on what who had told him of the personnel of the island, he saw without doubt that the man could have been no other than that Mr. Power who had named as Blackstock's assistant. Power was an Irish name; Coast had catalogued the man as of Irish extraction, at sight.

If the motive for the assassination remained dark, that Blackstock was pry to it, if not the prime instigator of the crime, was as patent as daylight.

Coast knew in his heart that he was fated never to leave No Man's Land while the woman he loved remained there with the man he feared, despised and hated.

Mr. Appleyard, having made fast the dory, sat himself down, filled and lighted his pipe, and for several moments regarded Coast with a look at once contemplative, penetrating and sympathetic. Then he chose to divert his employer with an enigmatical observation.

"Silly of you," he remarked coolly. Coast came out of his abstraction with a start. "What's that?" he demanded sharply.

"I said: 'Silly of you.'"

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean," drawled the little man, "that you're wasting valuable time standing there with your hands idle and trying to make up your mind what's best to be done about it. If we were only a bit better acquainted, or if you had a grain of perspicacity in your make-up, you'd have realized long ago that you'd better leave it all to me."

"What?" stammered Coast. "What in thunder are you talking about?"

Appleyard removed the pipe from his mouth and waved it comprehensively toward the island. "That," he said, sententious, smiling sweetly up into the amazed face of his companion.

"Your predicament," he added. "If you'd only stayed put, I'd have had everything fixed, but of course you had to butt in and complicate matters. Not that I'm at all dismayed; I can still arrange everything satisfactorily, I think. But you oughtn't to interfere. If I didn't like you so much I'd be awful vexed, honest I would!"

Coast sat down and gasped with astonishment and irrational resentment. "Either you're mad!" he said—"raving—or—"

"You lose your first guess," the little man interrupted calmly. "I'm talking sense, and I'll prove it. Listen; you're chuckling your—hmm!—brains for an excuse to go back and establish yourself on No Man's Land—personally gratified to the inhabitants, temporarily at least. Aren't you?"

Coast's jaw dropped. "How do you know that?" he breathed, thunder-struck.

"I'm the best little guesser you ever met," replied Appleyard complacently. "Take it from me, I'm wise to a lot more than you ever dreamed. Furthermore, I'm for you. Now, with that entrance clearly established, are you willing to put yourself in my hands and rest easy in my assurance that you'll win out, or do you prefer to blunder on in your infatuated, bull-headed way and take your chances?"

"But—but—who are you? What do you know?"

"I'm the man in the know in this case, all right. But that's not the point. I'll explain, and to your satisfaction, later. For the present, the questions is: Will you or won't you trust me?"

Coast made a helpless gesture. "Go on," he said.

"Good enough. Now," continued Appleyard, rising, "the first thing to do is to clear out of this. You get the anchor up and I'll start the machinery."

"But—"

"Put, put! Leave it to me; I'm the doctor, and I'm handing you the only possible prescription, based on an exhaustive diagnosis of the symptoms, of cetera. And you'd better hump yourself. As things stand, the little man paused to explain with a trace of impatience, seeing that Coast made no move and was on the point of interposing further objections, "we have the advantage of our friends ashore. We know who they are, but they don't know us. But if we stick round here it's only a question of time before we're discovered. Whereas, if we fold our tent and silently beat it, we can return anon (get that 'anon?') and they'll have less excuse for identifying us with the first rash intruders. Moreover, we shall have had time to study the situation in detail and plan our campaign accordingly. . . . Now will you get that mud-hook up?"

He turned his back to Coast and prepared to unmoor the motor, while his putative employer, mystified and talked into a condition of semi-hypnotism, silently rose and clambered forward.

By the time he had weighed in the light anchor and returned to the cockpit, the little engine was troubling busily and the Echo had begun to move. Appleyard at the wheel, imperturbable, steering by the compass on the west at his side, he nodded satisfaction as Coast began to coil the cable, still dazed and almost inclined to credit the preposterous situation to a waking dream.

"Good!" said the little man. "Now get below and change—you can't afford to catch your death, standing round in those dripping rags—and relieve me, that I may do the same. Furthermore, I'd be glad of a drop of grog. We'll talk later."

"Do you mind telling me where you're bound?" Coast inquired with mild sarcasm.

"Not at all. This course ought to take us clear of Devil's Bridge," returned the little man hopefully.

Coast was in a more cheerful mood, too, when he returned, the confidence and courage of his manner bearing witness to the restorative power of plenty of hot coffee and bacon and eggs.

"A change has come over the spirit of our dream—you?" Appleyard inquired. "Nothing like food on the human stomach to make the skies seem brighter. Not that it seems to affect this weather any; it's thick as curds. We ought to pick up that buoy before long—won't be happy till I get it."

"You're sure about this thing?" asked Coast, perhaps not quite coherently. The other seemed to understand him, none the less.

"Absolutely-lolly," he returned. "I know where we started from and what we're aiming for; this is a perfectly good compass, so long as you keep it from flirting with the coil; and I've made allowance for a leech. You watch!"

Coast sat down. "Well?" he said, with the air of one no longer to be denied.

"Well," said the little man reluctantly. "If you must know all . . ." Coast received an amused glance. "I read the papers."

"What's that go to do?"

"So, when you were kind enough to tell me your real name, after your gallant rescue yesterday morning, I knew at once just who and what you were."

"Oh!" said Coast, a thought blankly. "Just so. It never occurred to you that you were a public character, in a way? I noticed that. And your lack of self-consciousness interested me. Also the aroma of mystery you exhale, intrigued (if I may coin the word) my romantic imagination."

Coast flushed. "The deuce it did!" he exclaimed angrily.

"Don't lose your temper—please! I know I sound impertinent, but I don't mean to be so; it's just my temperament makes me such a cut-up. . . . When I waked up before you did yesterday, I thought it all out, and I see to myself, sez I: 'His biography ain't half-written yet, and unless I'm mistaken something grievous, Romance is a-headin' of him by the hand, like a little chellid. If I can work it, I'm goin' to stick round and see what happens next.' You see, it's my business to go about nosing into other people's."

"I see," said Coast curtly, with a feeling of contempt which he took no trouble to disguise.

"Yes," assented Appleyard serenely. "I make my living that way. Government pays me a handsome salary for doing it."

"What?" A light was beginning to dawn upon Coast.

The little man nodded gravely. "The U. S. Secret Service," he affirmed.

"Let us begin at the beginning, for clearer understanding," Appleyard continued. "I'm not here for my health—I'm on the job; and things have shaped round so that I want your help temporarily—while you certainly need mine. That's why I'm letting you in by the basement door and speaking in stage whispers. You get me? What I'm telling you is to be kept under your hat."

"Certainly; that's understood."

"Right you are. . . . Now, the particular phase of lawless industry at present engaging my distinguished professional attention is"—he allowed himself the dramatic pause—"smuggling. For some time the Treasury Department has been aware that a very considerable quantity of highly dutiable goods was finding its way into the country—mainly for the New York markets—without paying toll.

A syndicate of Malden Lane Jewelers has been reaping most of the profit, although other goods have been coming through; but that's by the way. Now the Customs net is fine enough to assure us that no such heavy importations could have been sneaked in through any regular port of entry. All we were certain of was that it was getting in duty-free—though we couldn't prove even that. . . . So then, I was turned loose on the problem, and I've been puzzling over it for six months."

He was briefly silent, apparently in reluctant mood. "Early in the game," he resumed, "I had cause to believe that most of the stuff was seeping in through New England. So I sat me down and tried to figure it out from the other side's point of view—supposing I wanted to turn the trick on my own account. See?"

"Clearly. Go on."

15 YEAR OLD NEGRO CONDEMNED TO HANG.

Little Rock, Ark.—Five hundred letters daily is a conservative estimate of the petitions being received by Gov. Donahoe to prevent the hanging here of Earl Gitchrist, a 15 year old negro who was sentenced to be hanged here Sept. 28th on a charge of murdering a companion, Will Longley, June 4th last. This is the result of movement instituted in the North. The Negro will not hang Sept. 28 and probably not at all. The case is not and never has been up to the Governor. Gitchrist was convicted June 29th and immediately afterward an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court and that court will not pass on the case until late in October. It may be reversed and sent back for new trial and few believe that there will be a second conviction. Thus it appears that all this sympathy and concern is premature and unnecessary. Should the courts finally decide against him, there is no likelihood whatever that Gov. Donahoe who has shown himself a humanitarian, would permit him to be hanged.
